UPCOMING MEETINGS

Sunday, Mar. 22 at – Meeting Topic: What's Love Got to Do With It?

Most mysteries and thrillers have a romantic element to them, even if it's a one-night stand for the hero (can anyone say "Bond girls?"). At what point does that element turn a suspense novel into romantic suspense?

At 2:00 p.m., we'll begin with our Reader's Forum on mysteries and romance - love the mix? Hate it? How much is too much?

At 3:00 p.m., join Lisa Kessler and Beth Yarnall, two southern California authors who are making a name for themselves in romance, with a heavy dose of danger.

Lisa Kessler is an Amazon Best Selling author of dark paranormal fiction. Her debut novel, Night Walker, won a San Diego Book Award for Best Published Fantasy-Sci-fi-Horror as well as the Romance Through the Ages Award for Best Paranormal and Best First Book. She currently writes the Night Series and the Moon Series for Entangled Publishing. Her short stories have been published in print anthologies and magazines, and her vampire story, Immortal Beloved, was a finalist for a Bram Stoker award. You can learn more about Lisa at her website – <http://www.authorlisakessler.com/>

Award winning author, Beth Yarnall writes romantic suspense, mysteries and the occasional hilarious tweet. For a number of years, Beth made her living as a hairstylist and makeup artist and co-owned a salon. Somehow hairstylists and salons always seem to find their way into her stories. Beth lives in Southern California with her husband, two sons, and their rescue dog, where she is hard at work on her next novel. For more about Beth and her stories, please visit her website – www.bethyarnall.com.

MEETING ROUNDUP

By Pat H. Broeske

Our February meeting – the second of our annual Forensics Fest meetings – was marked by a pair of memorable speakers. David Putnam discussed his journey from law enforcement to writing. Richard Rodriguez, of the O.C. Sheriff-Coroner Dept., gave a vivid (and not for the squeamish) PowerPoint presentation about the agency and some of its investigations.

During his more than thirty years in law enforcement Putnam was an officer with the Sheriff's Department in Ontario, South Central Los Angeles, and San Bernardino. He also worked out of Hawaii as a special agent, working on white collar crime and smuggling.

He recounted some of his cases, which involved bank robbers (one known as “the handsome bank robber”), gang members, meth dealers and other nefarious types. It was while working surveillance – “there was quite a bit of down time” – that he read mystery and crime books, and realized that many authors weren't authoritative about their subjects. “I got to thinking that I could do better,” said Putnam. After all, he explained, “writing police reports is a lot like writing short stories.”

His earliest books were written in longhand on legal pads; he wrote numerous books before he managed to sell his 2014 title, The Disposables (Oceanview Publishing) about an ex-cop who is also an ex-con. Publishers Weekly called it “a fast-paced tale of idealism and corruption.” The recent follow-up, The Replacements, has also garnered strong reviews; Publishers Weekly noted, “Putnam steadily ratchets up the tension while memorable supporting characters ... help engage reader interest.”

Rodriguez, who is Chief Training Officer for the Coroner Division, discussed the agency's workings and their responsibility. “We're here to protect the deceased. To give them a voice,” he said. The coroner determines the mode, manner and cause of death. The different types of death are: homicide, suicide, accident, natural and undetermined. Rodriguez talked about various investigations and how determinations were made.

His talk included plenty of information for authors to consider. Did you know that a dead body can still tan? Or that it takes eight weeks for a body to decompose in the ground, compared to one week in the air and two weeks in the water? Now you do.
